

Federal Judge Declares Section 7-A Is Void and Frees Weirton Company

Government's Bill of Complaint Dismissed Against Steel Firm for Interference in Collective Bargaining of Employees.

UNCONSTITUTIONAL

Weirton Case Will Clarify Much Litigation, Because It Was Considered an Important Test.

Wilmington, Del., Feb. 27. (AP)—Federal Judge John P. Neilds today declared unconstitutional and void Section 7-A of the National Industrial Recovery Act and dismissed the government's suit for an injunction against the Weirton Steel Company.

Judge Neilds dismissed the government's bill of complaint for an injunction to restrain the company from alleged interference in its workers' selection of collective bargaining representatives.

Judge Neilds said: "There is no showing on the part of the plaintiff warranting the court in issuing an injunction."

"Section 7-A, as applied to defendant and its business, is unconstitutional and void."

"This opinion contains a statement of the essential facts and of the law applicable thereto in conformity with equity rule 70 1/2."

"The bill must be dismissed."

The government in its suit contended the Weirton employee representation plan, or so-called company union, did not constitute an adequate arrangement of collective bargaining.

The Weirton case was generally regarded as one of the most important tests of the labor guarantee provisions of the National Industrial Recovery Act.

The government instituted the proceedings nearly a year ago and lost the first skirmish when Judge Neilds refused to issue a preliminary injunction, holding that under the Norris-LaGuardia act a hearing with witnesses in open court was necessary.

The trial began last October and lasted about seven weeks.

The government contended the employee representation plan, or so-called company union, did not adequately serve the purposes of section 7-A of the recovery act because it did not permit collective bargaining by the employees through representatives of their own choosing.

It was argued that the company instituted the employees' organization, finances it and conducted a campaign of intimidation against employees desirous of affiliation with the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers.

The company employee normally about 14,000 men in Weirton and Clarksburg, W. Va., and in Steubenville, O.

Weirton counsel countered with claims that the Amalgamated officers used coercion, including a threat that workers had to join it the time of organization or it would cost them $50 later.

It also was contended the Amalgamated demanded a "closed shop" whereby the company could employ only amalgamated members—and the Weirton lawyers held that the act did not provide for it.

On the constitutional issue, the company took the position that congress can not regulate commerce not of an interstate or foreign nature, that its relationship with the workers was not a part of interstate commerce, and that, therefore, any interpretation which would bring that relationship under provisions of NIRA's Section 7A made the act unconstitutional.

Constitutional opposition also was based on the due process of law provisions of the nation's fundamental law.

Weirton attorneys also challenged the legal status of the national labor board and questioned its right to interfere with the employees' balloting. It denied breaking an agreement with the labor board and held that the board itself violated an understanding by altering the rules for an employee election.

The board was to have supervised an election of collective bargaining representatives in December, 1932, but because of the rules for it laid down by the board violated the election plan of the employees, the board's plan was ignored. Representatives favorable to the company plan were elected.

U. S. To Appeal

Washington, Feb. 27. (AP)—Francis Biddle, chairman of the Labor Relations Board, said today he understood the government would appeal Federal Judge John P. Neilds' decision in Wilmington that section 7A of the Recovery Act was unconstitutional as applied to the Weirton Steel Co.

The decision, dismissing the government's petition for an injunction to restrain the steel company from alleged interference with its employees' selection of representatives for collective bargaining, would not affect the Labor Relations Board's work in any way, Biddle said.

He expressed the opinion that the decision and its appeal would hasten a Supreme Court ruling on the constitutionality of 7-A, which he said would be helpful to all the labor boards.

Ethiopian Ruler Makes A Peace Offer to Italy

Rome, Feb. 27. (AP)—Negradas Yesus, Ethiopian charge d'affaires, announced today that Emperor Haile Selassie would guarantee that if Italy withdrew the troops on their way to East Africa, Ethiopia would not so much as "touch a stone" belonging to Italy's Italian colonies.

Yesus made this statement in an interview with foreign newspapermen in which he reiterated previous statements that Ethiopia desired peace.

"I have just received a letter from the emperor," said the Ethiopian diplomat, "in which he swears on his dynasty that Ethiopia never made any aggressive move toward Italy and never had any such intention."

"Hence, the mobilization of Italian troops near the frontiers is inexplicable to the emperor whose sole desire is to live in peace and friendly relations with Italy and Europe. The emperor remains faithful to the League of Nations."

Yesus said he knew nothing of a report in Addis Ababa, capital of Ethiopia, that Italy was recruiting troops in Yemen.

Meanwhile the S. S. Arabia sailed from Naples with additional troops and war materials bound for East Africa.

Temperate Weather Arrives In West As East Gets Taste of Cold

By the Associated Press.

While winter's front line assaulted eastern states, temperate weather in the west started to obliterate a snow blanket and frigid temperatures that gripped the west and large sections of the south.

Temperatures raced downward along the eastern seaboard as snowstorms swirled in from the west, muffling New York, Pennsylvania, and other states. In a few hours the mercury fell from 53 degrees to 15 in New York city. Storm warnings were posted to all eastern shipping.

More than nine inches of snow gripped the panhandle of West Virginia, and spring weather was routed by snow from the nation's capital. Eastern highway transportation was hampered and air traffic all but halted.

Plains and midwestern states cleared drifted highways as temperatures abated from the sub-zero depths that reached 20 degrees below at Bemidji, Minn., yesterday. Rocky Mountain states reported melting snows and clearing skies.

Spring weather, the thermometer at 54, was Puget Sound's boast with Pacific Coast rains forecast today. Southern Californians again built smudges to protect citrus fruit from below freezing temperatures and fruit ranchers of the Rio Grande valley feared low temperatures. Two weather deaths were reported from Texas.

As wintry weather retired from Oklahoma and other western states, farmers hoped for rain to repair damage by recent dust storms to the wheat crop.

Weather forecasters held out hopes to moderate weather for central sections of the nation Wednesday and the east by Thursday.

The $25 bond may be purchased for $18.75; the $50 bond for $37.50; the $100 bond for $75; the $500 bond for $375; and the $1,000 bond for $750. The Ulster County Board of Supervisors will meet in special session early next week at the court house to carry out the order of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, which was unanimously affirmed Tuesday afternoon by the Court of Appeals, directing the board to reinstate James F. Loughran as county superintendent of highways.

County Attorney Arthur B. Ewig when interviewed today stated that if it could possibly be arranged the special meeting of the supervisors would be held Monday evening, and in any case the meeting would be held the early part of next week.

Questioned as to rumors that have been current in the city for some time that in anticipation of the higher court handing down a decision in favor of Mr. Loughran, that the Democratic supervisors were preparing to draft new charges to be lodged against Mr. Loughran, Mr. Ewig said he knew nothing about it.

Gets Back Salary

The order of the Appellate Division directs the Board of Supervisors to reinstate Mr. Loughran as county superintendent of highways and that his salary be paid from the time he was dismissed until the time of his reinstatement. Mr. Loughran was dismissed as county superintendent on April 27, 1934.

Harry H. Flemming, who represented Mr. Loughran before the board and in the courts, said this morning that he did not care to make any comment on the case, as the order, which had been unanimously affirmed by the highest court in the state, was explicit.

"Speaks For Itself"

"The decision speaks for itself," said Mr. Loughran when asked for a statement.

The decision of the courts in favor of Mr. Loughran carries with it the burden of the costs of all the proceedings which must be borne by the county. No definite figures are available at this time as to what the cost is, but it is known that the cost of carrying the case to the Appellate Division was fully $1,600.

Cost to Taxpayers

Political experts figure that the cost of the proceedings will be somewhere between $8,000 and $10,000 of Ulster county. That the proceedings have been expensive no one questions, and that fact led to rumors being current on the streets here that a taxpayers' action was contemplated being brought against the Democratic supervisors to compel them to personally stand the expenses involved in the proceedings to oust Mr. Loughran.

It will be recalled that the charges, which have been dismissed by the courts, were lodged against Mr. Loughran by Supervisor McDowell of the town of Wawarsing. These charges after a lengthy trial in which the board acted as judges, were sustained by a strictly party vote of 17 to 16, the Republican members of the board voting to dismiss the charges and retain Mr. Loughran.

The position of county superintendent of highways pays a salary of $4,500 a year.

Since the ousting of Mr. Loughran the position has been filled by Arthur P. Hallinan, who was city engineer during the Carey administration.

WALKER HAS TO APRIL 21 TO REGISTER IN ENGLAND

London, Feb. 27. (AP)—While James J. Walker indicated his intention today of complying at once with the requirement that aliens visiting in England shall register, friends of the former New York mayor expressed the opinion his creditors were attempting to embarrass him.

The question of Walker's failure to register, it was pointed out, was raised in court by the attorney for one of the creditor firms.

Legal experts, however, said it appeared doubtful the creditors would reap any advantage from an attempt to force Walker to return to the United States. The New Yorker has until April 21 to register, the chief inspector of the registration bureau explained.

"Expensive Experiment"

Athens, N. Y., Feb. 27. (AP)—The first shots were fired against the Democratic sponsored rural rehabilitation bill today as Senator Joseph R. Benton, Republican, announced that it was "another $50,000,000 experiment that can but end in disaster" and "a perfect example of the kind of thing that has been done in the past."

Alert Patrolman, Checking Car for Illegal Use of License Plates, Traps Transporters of Alcohol in Chase Here.

Kinch Arrests Two Men With 44 Cans of Alcohol Alleged ABC Violation

Would Not Stop Violators Attempted to Get Away in Broadway Traffic, But Were Captured on Side Street.

Alertness on the part of Officer Howard A. Kinch Tuesday night while patrolling Broadway in one of the police cars landed two men in jail on charges of violating the Alcoholic Beverage Control Law and the motor vehicle law.

One of the men is Pietro Laude, 60, wanted by the Federal government for violation of a parole, and who is alleged to have a long police record, and the other is Alfred E. Recor, 36, operator of the car. Both are residents of Springfield, Mass.

Suspicious of the big Cadillac in which the two were riding when he saw the license plates carefully wired on, Officer Kinch decided to check on it. Recor, driving the car, ignored two commands of the policeman to stop on upper Broadway, attempting to get away in traffic, and stopped only after Kinch forced him into the curb and almost against a tree on Van Buren street.

Questioned by the policeman, the two refused to answer or give any information about 44 five-gallon cans of alcohol they had in the car. He placed them under arrest. At police headquarters a teletype message sent out by Acting Sergeant James P. Martin revealed that the plates on the Cadillac had been issued for another car.

Sergeant Martin held the two in $250 bail each. Lacking the money they went to jail for the night.

This morning, Fred Stoudt, secretary to Police Chief J. Allan Wood, teletyped to Springfield, Mass., asking if the two men in custody here had criminal records.

Laude, the answer stated, is wanted by Federal authorities for violation of a parole. He has a police record of considerable length. Recor has faced one charge of non-support.

This morning, Laude and Recor were arraigned in city court before Assistant Judge Walter H. Gill. Through counsel, John M. Cashin of the law firm, Ewig and Cashin, they had their hearings adjourned. Bail was fixed at $500 each. Roger H. Loughran represented the police.

HAUPTMANN HAS TURNED TO SPIRITUAL CONSOLATION

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 27. (AP)—Bruno Hauptmann has turned to spiritual consolation as he waits in the Jersey state prison death house for developments on his appeal from a death sentence.

"He's not downhearted—how could he be, when he's innocent," declared his wife, Anna Hauptmann, after a visit to his cell yesterday with the Rev. D. C. Werner of New York. The minister said Hauptmann prayed daily and accepted spiritual advice. He brought the prisoner a German book, "Steps to Christ," and affirmed, too, that the prisoner was in apparently good spirits.

Mrs. Hauptmann said her husband asked her many questions about their infant son, Manfred.

It was regarded as more than likely that the attorneys would ask the court of errors and appeals to postpone argument on the appeal from the May to the October term because of inability to prepare a case in time. The trial manuscript, from which the appeal is being formed, amounts to more than 1,500,000 words.

IN ANTI-JAPANESE FEELING

Tokyo, Feb. 27. (AP)—Koki Hirota, Japanese foreign minister, was quoted today in the Rengo (Japanese) News Agency's transcript of proceedings in the House of Representatives as saying anti-Japanese sentiment in the United States was "growing and alarming."

The foreign minister's reported declaration was made in discussion of the situation of Japanese in Arizona and other western states.

Asked whether Tokyo was requesting indemnification in behalf of Arizona Japanese, Hirota replied, according to the Rengo transcript: "Hitherto I have not heard of any claims for damages, but in the event any Japanese are killed or injured, this government will take necessary measures."

Legislative Committee Favors Suspension of Mortgage Guarantees

Says No Mortgage Group in Rehabilitation Should Be Allowed to Resume Business Until Policy is Formed.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Would Allow No Issuance of Guarantees Until 1936, Would Limit Renewals.

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 27. (AP)—The joint legislative committee to investigate the guaranteed mortgage situation in New York state today recommended that the legislature enact laws providing for a temporary suspension of the mortgage guaranty business until a permanent legislative policy has been adopted.

"It is important," the committee reported to the legislature, "that no mortgage guaranty company now in rehabilitation should be permitted to resume the business of guaranteeing mortgages until a permanent legislative policy has been worked out."

To accomplish the temporary suspension, the committee recommended legislation to:

Prohibit the issuance of new guarantees until July 1, 1936.

Permit renewal and extension by companies not in liquidation of guarantees where there is no default.

The investigating committee was appointed in April, 1934, to devise remedial legislation to assure future protection to certificate holders, and as a result of a previous report the state mortgage authority was created by the legislature two weeks ago to take over rehabilitation of defunct guaranteed mortgage certificates worth $800,000,000.

Referring to temporary suspension of the guaranty business, the committee said:

"Being convinced of the evils of the past with respect to the mortgage guaranty business and the difficulty at the present time in defining the permanent policy of the state as to the future transactions of such business, it becomes imperative, for a brief space of time, to prohibit the issuance of any and all guarantees with respect to mortgages whether certificated or uncertificated."

The group added there "will be no market for such guarantees" anyway.

The committee said it would be "unwise, at this time, without further study and investigation, to attempt by law to define the permanent policy of the state with respect to this critically dangerous business."

Senator Joseph Lazarus, chairman, urged the group's continuation until March 1, 1936 to permit it to give more study to a permanent legislation.

The committee reported its investigation showed "remarkable unanimity of belief with respect to advantages of creating a new state department, to be designated for the lack of better name, as the Department of Mortgages and Real Estate."

"The subject of guaranteeing and certifying mortgages is inextricably interwoven with the whole subject of real estate and land titles," said the committee, "and any program of permanent legislation dealing with the subject of mortgages must of necessity be comprehensive enough to include the broad subject of real estate and land titles."

Definite restrictions must be placed on mortgage certificates if their issuance is to be permitted in the future, the committee said.

"There is a sharp divergence of opinion as to whether the guarantees of mortgages in the future should be limited to whole mortgages," it was declared. "It has been suggested that if certificated issues are to be permitted in the future no certificate should be issued for less than $5,000 so as to prevent their sale in trifling amounts to unscrupulous investors."

"There is also a pronounced aversion to permitting the issuance of group series certificates because most of the difficulties of the mortgage companies and their certificate holders arose in such group series."

HIROTA SAYS U. S. GAINS

IN ANTI-JAPANESE FEELING

Roosevelt, Happy, Confident, Turns To Capital To Battle For Programs

Wage Compromise Under Way to Push Relief Bill President Silent About Impending Legislation But Attitude Denotes Certainty That He Will Conquer Opponents.

SHIP SUBSIDY

Will Send Ship Subsidy Recommendations to Congress Thursday or Friday.

Washington, Feb. 27. (AP)—Efforts to work out a compromise of the wage controversy in the administration's $4,850,000,000 relief bill were believed to be under way in earnest today as Senator Wagner (D-NY) conferred with several Senators favoring the McCarran amendment which President Roosevelt opposes.

Wagner, who voted for the prevailing wage along with 20 other Democrats, 21 Republicans, one Progressive and one Farmer-Laborite, was understood to be talking the lead in maneuvering for a compromise acceptable to the administration.

Meanwhile, administration leaders withheld all comment on the troubled relief situation pending the arrival tomorrow of President Roosevelt from Hyde Park. Chairman Glass (D-Va.) has made no move to call the appropriations committee, to which the bill was returned last week.

Senator McCarran (D-Nev) author of the wage amendment, entered Wagner's office in the Senate office building with a statement he would accept a compromise if it retained the "spirit" of his amendment.

Officers Deny Knowing Of Lindbergh Ransom Money Found in Boston

Boston, Feb. 27. (AP)—Federal officials, officers of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, airline and railroad officials today professed ignorance of the reported circulation of Lindbergh ransom bills in Boston and Providence despite persistent reports that $550 of the gold certificates had been traced.

The Boston Post today reiterated and elaborated its report of yesterday, setting forth that, despite the denials of Federal authorities in Boston and Washington, the Department of Justice agents were still actively tracing the bills said to have appeared in New England in the past 12 months.

The Post says the first Lindbergh currency appeared in Boston a year ago in the ticket office of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad and that the final money traced by Washington authorities was paid into a local airline office for transportation last week. The Post maintained that the entire $550 was cleared through the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston although $500 of the sum originated in Providence.

Providence banks and clearing houses today denied any knowledge of the gold certificates.

Railroad, airlines and bank officials in Boston said they were unaware of any investigation by Federal agents. All sources also denied knowledge of any alleged Lindbergh bills passing through their organizations. U. S. Attorney Francis J. W. Ford was not available for comment.

New Jersey In Ignorance

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 27. (AP)—Major Charles H. Schoeffel, deputy superintendent of the State Police, said today that organization "knows nothing" about the Lindbergh ransom money reported to have been found in Boston.

"We called in the Department of Justice in New York and they know nothing about it," he said.

"If the Boston police knew anything about it, they would have notified us, and if the Department of Justice in Boston had it, they would have notified New York about it."

$15,000 Mail Pouch Robbery in Kentucky

Hazard, Ky., Feb. 27. (AP)—Three men with pistols seized a mail pouch believed to contain $15,000 from a government truck near Tribbey today. They escaped in a small coupe without license plates.

The pouch contained the payroll for the Hardy-Burlingham mining company.

The mail truck operates between Hazard and Hardy. The pouch taken by the robbers was one made up on the Lexington-Flemington train and delivered to the truck at Hazard.

Not far from Tribbey the robbers covered the mail driver with their pistols and forced him to a stop. They seized the pouch and sped away.

President Silent About Impending Legislation But Attitude Denotes Certainty That He Will Conquer Opponents.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Feb. 27. (AP)—President Roosevelt turned toward the capital today silent but apparently confident about the legislative conflict in the senate.

He broke his home stay today to receive newspapermen for the regular semi-weekly interview before taking a drive to a section of the estate where new trees are to be planted in furtherance of his forestry experimentation.

In response to questions about the administration legislative program Mr. Roosevelt simply replied that he had not been in communication with congressional leaders. He adhered to his announced policy of not commenting on pending legislation.

This was regarded as indicative of confidence in final enactment by the Democratic congress of his program.

Mr. Roosevelt pointed happily to the dwindled pile of reports and mail remaining on the desk of his small study room after two days of work.

Speaking of his return to Washington he observed he had two engagements which required his presence there tomorrow, the annual army and navy reception at the White House Thursday night and a luncheon to Governor Murphy of the Philippines on Saturday.

Otherwise he indicated he might stay home another day or so. He said he hoped to send his recommendations for direct ship subsidy to Congress tomorrow or Friday.

The automobile ride over the roads covered with newly fallen snow led to a pasture in a corner of the estate now grown over with birch.

Chicago Mayor Gets Party's Nomination

Chicago, Feb. 27 (AP).—Edward J. Kelly, Chicago's brusque but jovial 53-year-old mayor, rode the crest of a record breaking Democratic vote Tuesday to win his party's nomination by the largest plurality ever given a mayoralty candidate in a Chicago primary. The Democrats also swept to victory in the aldermanic races.

The red-haired six foot Democrat, the city's chief executive during the world's fair as the successor to the late Anton J. Cermak, and who once swung a pickaxe for his living, was nominated to succeed himself by a vote of 479,825. His plurality was 449,672. Both figures were record breaking.

Emil C. Wetten, an attorney, was nominated by the Republicans to oppose Kelly in the April election. His vote was 69,500 and his plurality was 32,439. The Republican total vote was only 114,429.

Mortimer Flynn, a coal dealer and friend of former Mayor William Hale Thompson, was second in the Republican primary, and Mrs. Grace Gray, the city's first woman candidate for mayor, a poor third.

Kelly, whose supporters claim he has been rapidly pulling Chicago out of the financial morass into which it sank a few years ago, easily outdistanced his opponents, James F. Robertson, John P. O'Meara, and Martin Powroznik.

Kelly's vote was double that of 234,258 polled by the late Mayor Cermak in the 1931 primaries, the Democratic high point at the time. Likewise the Kelly vote smashed the high Republican record of 342,337 for the G. O. P. nominee in 1927.

Routine In Jail For William MacCracken

Washington, Feb. 27 (AP).—Sitting in jail today, William P. MacCracken could take some comfort in the fact that he will serve only eight days and 18 hours of his 10-day sentence for contempt of the United States Senate.

Superintendent T. M. Rives of the District of Columbia Jail, where MacCracken was admitted at 4 p. m. yesterday, said that under the prison rules, the day of arrival and day of departure are considered part of the sentence.

The Washington lawyer who once was assistant secretary of commerce from aeronautics, will be released at 10 a. m. Thursday, March 7, Rives said.

The former "Little Cabinet" officer got a job carrying the privilege of a cot with clean sheets and the right to buy cake, pie and candy from the jail store.

Rives assigned him to clerical duties when he expressed a willingness to work, but insisted MacCracken would receive no special favors and would not be permitted to have food from the outside. Rives said the lawyer's routine would be as follows:

"He will get up about 7 o'clock. After breakfast he will work on the records with about 19 other trustees. He will have lunch about 11:30, and supper at 5 o'clock."

"After that he can read, play cards or talk until he is ready to go to bed. On Saturday and Sunday, he can go out to play ball on the jail grounds, with a guard present, but he will not be permitted to leave the grounds."

Mrs. MacCracken or other visitors will be permitted to see him Sunday night. Because he is a trustee, he won't have to visit through a screen, but can receive them in the office."

The lawyer's breakfast menu today was announced as fried bologna, apples, biscuit, cereal and coffee.

More Snow and Close To Zero Temperature

Another snow storm broke over Kingston Tuesday evening when snow began falling here about 10 o'clock that evening and continued during the night. There was a high wind prevailing throughout the night, and the temperature began dropping. The coldest temperature recorded was at 5:30 o'clock this morning when the recording thermometer at the city hall recorded a low of 13 degrees above zero.

About two inches of snow fell during the storm of last night, but the snow was light and housewives were able to use a broom with as much success as a shovel in clearing off the walks.

Gloom Over Colgate

Hamilton, N. Y., Feb. 27 (AP).—Gloom hung thick over the Colgate University campus today as more than 50 students stayed in bed with German measles, and week-end parties were cancelled. One bright spot in the otherwise drab social outlook for students was a decision that the parties would be held March 15 and 16. Students scurried last night to notify girl friends, many of them at distant points, of the change in date.

CAPITAL NEWS

HOLLISTER STURGES, Jr.

Albany, Feb. 27 (Special)—A resolution went before the Assembly yesterday to make some 40 acres of unused ground near Red Hook in Dutchess county, owned by New York city, into an airport. This acreage would supply this section of the state with a large enough station to handle a considerable amount of air traffic which has yet to be established along the Hudson River, for this type of transportation has not been substantially developed in a comparison with other parts of the country.

Another resolution of local interest is a request to the federal government to supply funds for certain reforestation that will increase water sheds which supply reservoirs and subsequently cities. The Catskill area was included in the request, for its shed is constantly replenishing the Ashokan Reservoir, the main water supply of New York city.

Assemblyman Bernard Austin had a resolution accepted by the lower house calling for Congress to repeal part of the laws on income tax returns which makes them a matter of public documents as he holds that knowledge of persons' wealth encourages such crimes as blackmail, fraudulent representation, kidnapping and lesser crimes such as robberies.

"Political" Project

A meeting was held by Senator William Byrnes for representatives from 28 counties, comprising the Appellate Division of the third department, to discuss the project of creating an authority to sell bonds for financing construction of a new Court House to be built, according to the constitution, in Albany. Each county would be obliged to purchase its share, which for Ulster would mean $37,500 on the principle and an annual debt service of $2,350. At present the cost of space for renting such needed quarters falls mostly on Albany county which chips in about $30,000 each year and gets only the paltry sum of $2,500 in return. Judge Daniel V. McNamee spoke for it on behalf of the Third Appellate Division. Another proponent was Charles B. Laurean of New York.

Speakers for the measure asserted that this district is the most important in the state as there is more legal business to be transacted, especially on compensation cases. Ulster county's Republican representative, J. Edward Conway, does not favor this proposal as he feels that it is an unnecessary added real estate tax burden on the people. Senator Byrnes spoke of it as a non-political idea, but it smacked with just this thought and will, as Mr. Conway has pointed out, mean just so many more dollars to the taxpayers.

Nightmare

Up from the Executive Chamber into the two legislative houses came the message from Governor Lehman on the Child Labor Amendment. He wants it enacted. So does President Roosevelt. Likewise lots of others. It is one thing that is the nightmare in politicians' political dreams, they can find no felt gloves with which to handle it. A public hearing was held some time ago and as a result the assemblymen want nothing further to do with it. If they favor this bill which has been lying dormant in committee for several weeks they will immediately lose some of their popularity. A good many points are to be said in stopping children from work, but there are up as many arguments why juveniles should be allowed to have a remunerative occupation. Mayor LaGuardia made a special trip from New York to press the measure.

Mories

Senator John T. McCall, New York Democrat, had a public hearing today on his bill aimed to put up fees that affect the motion picture industry and have a severe program of censorship and penalty. A score of speakers cracked down on the measure, declaring that it threatened to jeopardize the business and throw literally thousands of persons out of work as the required expenditures necessary under his provisions would make impossible the continuation of the enterprise.

$50,000,000 Experiment?

Poughkeepsie's Senator Frederic Bontecou (R.) hit into the Rossas bill, better known as the Rural Rehabilitation bill, last night, branding it as a "perfect example of weird federal New Deal policies incorporated into the New York state law." He described it as the "most far-reaching and loosest piece of legislation introduced this session." It sets up a corporation authorized to raise $50,000,000 through the sale of bonds. "While the bill specifically states in one paragraph that these bonds are not a liability to the state, and they would be issued against no tangible assets, it is also set forth in the next paragraph that the bonds become legal investments for fiduciaries," stated Mr. Bontecou. "It just doesn't make sense," he added, "the framers of this piece of legislation evidently do not realize that raising is a business and almost a profession, and it would be as logical to take a farmer to New York city and set him up in the insurance, brokerage, or even law business on practically no capital and with no guaranteed income."

Minority Leader Irving M. Ives, who led the lower house in its budget fight, has put in his word on the governor's supplementary budget additional appropriations of $546,212.21. "The governor's budget is imprudent," he stated, "and his figures do not respond to any known system of accounting. . . any thinking man would realize that this request means an admission on the part of the governor that he did not have the amount of money he said the state fund would need for the year 1935-1936. Further, there is every reason to assume that if he now says his budget was $34,372 out of the way, it actually must represent a greater deficit than that sum."

One of the first Texas memorial all dollars has been presented to the Panhandle-Maine historical society. The coins were minted by the Federal Reserve to advertise the Texas centennial of 1936.

MORE WOES FOR 'PRINCE MIKE'

Looking solemn, Harry Garguson—who laid society low during his career as "Prince Mike" Romanoff—resumed his customary place in the spotlight as the alleged villain in a conspiracy suit filed by Mrs. William E. Gould (above) against her "in-laws." She claimed Garguson drugged her and took her to his apartment to create a compromising situation for the benefit of her husband, who was paying her a $450-a-month separation maintenance. Mysterious Killer Murders Bank Guard

London, Feb. 27 (P)—A 20-year-old Welsh soldier standing guard in one of the key sentry posts in the bullion yard of the Bank of England was mysteriously shot and mortally wounded in the early morning darkness today.

Tight-lipped police and military authorities declined to comment on whether the guard's death was an accident or suicide, but it was understood one cartridge was missing from the victim's ammunition belt. Authorities said the dead man was James Baker.

The silence which settles over the city, London's financial district, after the thousands who throng the section during the day depart at nightfall, was broken shortly before dawn by the crack of a rifle shot.

"Turn out the guard," shouted a sergeant of the guard as he rushed to Baker's post at the main gate of the bullion yard near Threadneedle street.

Baker was found lying on the ground, blood flowing from a bullet wound in his head. He died soon afterward in a hospital.

The first intimation of the senseless occurrence within the closely guarded confines of the "Old Lady of Threadneedle street" came with the Welsh guard's barracks notification by police that "Baker met with an accident."

The young soldier, who was unmarried, had been in the army only a year. He was a member of the Prince of Wales' Company, a crack military organization familiar for years to American tourists who have witnessed the changing of the guard at Buckingham palace.

The Bank of England has been guarded nightly by a detail composed of an officer, a sergeant, two corporals, 24 men and a bugler since the institution was threatened by an infuriated mob during the Gordon riots in 1789.

An oil well in Jefferson Davis parish, Louisiana, that accidentally became ignited, shot flames in the air that could be seen at night 50 miles away.

Ives Law To Remain On Statute Books

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 27 (P)—The Ives law, requiring all teachers in the state to swear allegiance to the Federal Constitution, will remain in the New York state statute books.

A bill to repeal the law "most definitely will not be reported out."

Assemblyman Christopher C. McGrath, Bronx Democrat, said yesterday after a lengthy public hearing. Dr. Edward Mandel, associate superintendent of schools in New York city, opposed the bill and said teachers must accept employment on terms prescribed by the state since they are public officials, and added that "not by the remotest stretch of the imagination" could the Ives law be construed as interfering with academic freedom.

Senate Action Assured
Albany, N. Y., Feb. 27 (P)—Senate action on the Nunan-Ehrlich bill to limit the tax on real estate to two per cent of the "true value" of the property today was assured for next week as the result of a favorable report from the judicial committee of the upper house. The bill, designed to check rapidly rising real estate taxes, was approved yesterday despite vigorous opposition from municipal officers.

RAIDING THE COLLEGES

Another serious problem appears in higher education. Yale University complains that it's being looted of its brains. That isn't exactly the way President Angell puts it, but it's what he means when he says:

"The university will always wish to be as generous as possible in contributing to the public welfare through the service of its members. But when the number of such (government) appointments begins to mount, fairness to students requires that the university call a halt, despite its genuine desire to serve the public interest."

The government may have drawn unduly on Yale. That institution has several of its ablest professors serving as hired help at Washington. Some of the other university presidents probably feel just as bad about it. Such raiding is widespread.

At the same time, the university people must feel rather proud of the present governmental demand for their people, at Washington and elsewhere. Not long ago a college professor was generally regarded as a poor fish, all right perhaps to teach boys and girls, but so inept in practical affairs that he couldn't see beyond the end of his nose and didn't know enough to come in when it rained. Now, both in business and government, we see professors sitting in the seats of the mighty and directing or advising about vast affairs. This change must have a wholesome effect on the colleges themselves. The teaching profession gains prestige and power when it becomes a sort of highway to public honor. Young men and women of talent are attracted to public service, at a time when trained and informed minds are needed more than ever in public life.

BUSINESS PROTECTION.

If "economic democracy" is not won for the masses in America, says Raymond Gram Swing, a lecturing magazine writer, we'll get Fascism. He says this country for some years before depression was ruled by a "finance capitalism" that is government by bankers. He doesn't see much real change yet, he says. Wealth remains in the hands of a few. This concentration of economic power remains "frozen." Instead of being broken up in more general distribution, "The NRA and AAA," he complains, "have only increased the employers' power. We may yet see a coalition of radicals and liberals for the nation's good. They will cry out that there has been too much individualism, too much liberty, and then will come Fascism."

His analysis of the situation is rather severe, and he might be wrong in his prophecy. Still, European Fascism has come in about the way he describes. Leaders, seemingly liberal themselves, have appealed to liberals, and then when they gained power have turned and sewed everything up tight in a new conservatism. It has been the way especially of Hitler and Mussolini. Some American business men have thought, at times, that they'd like that sort of thing. But they wouldn't. There would be no business individualism left. Business would be protected only as a protection and just.

COBBLESTONES AND TINKERS.

It is interesting, to those who know the London language, to read a communication from the Master Shoe-Repairers' Association, condemning the use of the word "cobblers." The name of this association reveals the fact that cobblers have become "shoe-repairers." At least they are known to the term established in American usage.

"This is incredible," laments a tinkerer man who goes in for cobblers. "About the names of the old skilled crafts—cobblers, coppers, carpenters, and others—there is a dimity, a flavor, an honest and philosophical rusticity, that we can all spare from our vocabulary." He calls this a case of "bad taste and snobbery."

lack of historical feeling or traditional pride." It is all of that. Cobblers have been cobblers for at least a thousand years. It's a rich, ripe word. Why change now? And if the cobblers can get away with this, we'll soon have the tinkers calling themselves "renovizers of kitchen utensils" and tailors will be "master clothing artificers." That would be too much.

EYES ON THE BALL!

Too many players in this public relief game at Washington, and also too many spectators, have been losing sight of the ball. What is the ball? Re-employment. Getting the idle, empty-pocketed, debt-ridden, heart-broken millions of decent American workmen back to work. Making for them self-respecting jobs in private industry. Everything points to that fact. Every public and private plan should embody that purpose and contribute to that end. Every argument comes around eventually to that. Billions of words merely add up to the one word—JOBS.

Public jobs, whatever the wages, are a mere stop-gap. The dose, justifiable as a temporary expedient, is the way to ruin—ruin of human morale, ruin of public credit, ruin of the American system. Absorption of able-bodied workers, while they are still able, into useful industrial work, is necessary to save American labor, American capital and American government. The ball isn't politics. It isn't wages. It isn't profits. It's work now. "The night cometh, interests all depend. It's work, and it's work now." The night cometh, wherein no man can work.

THE NEW REDUCING DRUG.

Observations in two cases convinced Drs. A. de Chatelet and J. Motika, Berlin, that alpha-dinitrophenol is not a harmless drug, for even if given in the usual safe doses it produces symptoms that show that it affects both the kidneys and the heart.

"That the action of the heart was interfered with by alpha-dinitrophenol was shown in tests with the electrocardiograph machine on the patients, and these results were the same when the drug was used in animals."

Moreover, dinitrophenol does not always accomplish its aim—reduction of weight—for in one of the patients the largest doses that could be safely given changed neither the rate at which the body processes worked nor the body weight, and in the other one the weight did not decrease much until the sense of taste had been lessened and the patient had lost her appetite."

I am quoting from the German Archives of Clinical Medicine, Berlin.

Naturally the overweight individual will want to know why dinitrophenol is so successful in reducing weight in some individuals, causes skin eruptions in others, damages the heart and kidneys in others, and already a number of deaths have been recorded from its use. Your doctor will tell you that ordinary doses of other drugs will cause a rash like scarlet fever, or, perhaps, the lumps on the skin known as hives.

It is along the same line as asthma, hay fever and eczema. Why should 15 per cent of the population suffer with hay fever in the autumn and the other 85 per cent have no symptoms though razweed pollen is entering the nose and eyes of everybody?

When dinitrophenol agrees with, or is safe for the person to use, it increases the rate at which the body processes work to such an extent that a rise in temperature—a real fever—exists and this intense heat actually burns up the fat.

The drug should never be used until the usual methods of weight reduction—cutting down on food and increasing exercise—have been faithfully tried. In such cases the individual should consult his family doctor, and if he advises its use, he will also closely watch its effects.

Club Held Outing

Phoenicia, Feb. 26.—The New York Chapter of the Appalachian Mountain Club spent the holiday weekend at the Kinney farm, south of Phoenicia. The party had a marvelous time skiing on the ever slopes of the golf course at Shandaken, climbing Mt. Tremper and running down the fine old trails. When Lloyd Kinney has had out on the Kinney farm property. Some of the more expert skiers tried skiing along the country roads and were delighted with the thrills. Some members of the party found a pond in the neighborhood and enjoyed skating. Other members climbed home after spending the week-end with relatives in New York city.

A RAPID-FIRE ROMANCE BY EVAN EVANS.

SYNOPSIS: Brother Pascual and the Montezuma Kid have entered the Valley of the Dead to find a way to release Mateo Rubiz, condemned to die under its scorching sun. Pascual is made to work. He meets Mateo in the foul bunk-house. El Keed is given a horrible task, and then, rescued by Silver, master of the valley, as a quest, Juan-Silva has explained to Mateo that his hope-like serving woman is only waiting for the pleasure of seeing her master die.

Chapter 41

JUAN-SILVA'S DREAM

"BUT I shall not stay here in the Valley of the Dead until my life ends," Juan-Silva added. "All of this—all of these years—they are spent for a purpose."

"What purpose, señor?" the Kid asked.

"Shall I open my heart to you?" croaked Juan-Silva. "Shall I tell you that I am barely forty thousand pesos from my goal? And then I may leave the Valley of the Dead—I may sail over the sea—I may go again to Old Spain!"

"When I was a boy I was a shepherd in old Castile. The land of castles! You understand what I say? People make the shepherds sing songs. But all that I heard from my companions was cursing. But always there was something above us!"

He pointed upward. Heaven? wondered the Kid.

The old man continued: "There was always the castle on its rock. The trail wound up to it. But the castle was empty, and still we were all there. And as I walked with my sheep I used to look up and up, and I saw the castle and told myself that I would one day come to have a million pesos, and then I would buy that castle."

"You think, my friend, that these years in the Valley of the Dead have been a torment. But in the hot summer day I think of the castle holding its head among the blowing clouds. And in the winter I think of how my hall will be in Spain, and the great fire of logs burning on the hearth."

He actually extended his hands before him and rubbed them together as though at this moment a winter chill struck through him with the memory.

And Montana said, bluntly, "Will you have long with your castle?"

"Ah," grinned Juan-Silva, "you look at the body and you see that it is like old leather, ready to crack apart with a little bending. But the place to look is in the eyes of a man. Men have lived twenty years past a hundred. Considering them, I still have a third of my years to spend, and they shall be spent in my Spain, in my valley, in my castle on the rock."

In the strange company of Juan-Silva the days might have gone swiftly enough for the Kid, but behind his mind there was the constant anxiety about Rubiz, about the friar.

When he felt that he had gained some foothold in the thought of the old man, he spoke to him one day when they were in Juan-Silva's carriage.

He took the Kid with him every day for a drive of inspection; and at last Montana said: "Señor, there are two friends of mine in the valley."

THE FRIAR

"He's one."

"My lad, think of the good he is doing."

He gave his hoarse, croaking laugh.

And the Kid, looking down at his gripped hands, fiercely restrained the impulse to throttle the old fend at once.

"But then you have a second friend, El Keed?"

"Rubiz."

"Hat, Rubiz! But ask me for something I can give! The friar is a jewel to the other poor devils, and Rubiz is a jewel to me!"

"Well," said the Kid, slowly, "I don't ask you to set him free, I ask to see him, only."

"To see him? To talk with him, you mean?"

"Yes."

"Ah, my son," said Juan-Silva, "why do you make me say no to you so often when I have nothing in my heart but a sense of kindness and even of gratitude to you? This much I know—that not while I live will a man escape alive from the valley. But perhaps—three men together are a great strength!—perhaps you and your friends might work the miracle. They might pass the guard at the gate of the valley. They might pass even beyond the reach of those."

Here he paused, and pointed towards the wall of the valley. Along that wall three Indians were trotting their ponies. They looked clumsy, unwieldy, but the Kid knew that, once roused to action, man and horse would become as one savage beast to pursue an enemy.

And behind that trio the dust rose from the hooves of another set of three, and behind them still another appeared.

The Kid closed his eyes. And he began to think, not for the first time, of Rosita, far out there in the hills—but not far enough, because she would keep herself always close enough to one high point so that she could see what was happening in the Valley of the Dead. Or had she given up her watch before this? Had she retired towards the land of the living?

She might find enough of the sun-starred grasses to serve as fodder for the horses, but how did her own food last? Or what traps had she contrived for the lean jack rabbit, since she dared not shoot for fear the noise might reach some distant ear?

He had lost his count of days. But time was like a hand pulling at him constantly, and the tenacious grew little by little until he knew that a breaking-point was near.

How he could help his friends—that was the chiefest of the miracles now. But he could see no step of his way towards it. He spent hours, in addition, wondering anxiously what that "great good" might be which Juan-Silva expected to draw from him. And then he learned.

Old Maria stood inside his door. "The master wants you," she said. She remained there, standing back to let him pass through the door, and as he went by her she spoke: "Your hands are free. Why don't you use them? Why do you wait to die like a poor blind sheep?"

He could not answer this. He walked on before her into the patio of Juan-Silva, and as he stepped out into the blinding strength of the sun he saw the carriage and the four white horses already harnessed and waiting, though it was hardly time for the master to begin his daily drive. There were sweat stains on the four, moreover, and a servant was now rubbing down the spokes of the wheels.

When he spoke to the mozo who held the heads of the leaders, the man said, with a grin: "Great people have come—generals and great people!"

Old Maria still showed the way until she had opened the door into the main room of the house.

The Kid, as he entered, was gripped by guards who waited on either side of the doorway. Then he saw before him the cause. For in the middle of the room, at a table with Juan-Silva, were the lean, yellow-green face of Jack Lascar, peak-faced Major Alvarez, and above all the swiftness of General Ignacio Estrada.

All heads turned towards him as he stood there, made helpless by the hands that were fastened on his arms.

And Juan-Silva said: "Well, take your hands away from him. Even a great man like El Keed needs weapons. With his bare fists he can't do very much!"

So the Kid, made free, walked slowly on towards the table. Behind him, the guards were retiring from the room. Only old Maria remained to serve the guests, who already had before them little glasses of that fine, green-tasting fire, tequila.

It seemed to the Kid that he was advancing into an ethereal region, an atmosphere of pure hate. They were all smiling at him—Lascar, and the governor, and the major, and Juan-Silva.

Jack Lascar rose from his place and bowed to him stiffly.

"Your pleasure, Montana," he said, "ain't half as great as mine."

"You're sitting in at a big game, Jack," answered Montana. "If you've got the cards, do you think that you've got the stakes?"

"We're three with one thought, partner," said Lascar. "That thought is about you!"

"Sit down, my son," said Juan-Silva.

The Kid took a place at the end of the table, and old Maria poured out a glass of tequila for him.

"You, my general," said the old man, "should be the first one to speak."

The Lamb's Rest

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

AFTER the party was over and all had rested for a while Willy Nilly said:

"I must certainly clear up."

"I'll help you," said Rip. "We'll all help you," shouted the other Fuddle Wuddies.

Rip straightened the rug by pulling it with his teeth and paws, the others picked up crumbs that had fallen on the floor, and Sweet Face, the lamb, followed one after the other trying to be helpful.

"Willy Nilly won't have to worry about having his crumbs picked up. We're all very good at that," laughed Christopher Columbus Crow.

Christopher thought to himself that Sweet Face was being less useful than any of the others.

"The rest of us work more quickly and we do Sweet Face's work as well because he goes about it sweetly but not very capably. Oh, I know, he's one of those who'll do everything that he'll get us all to do everything for him. But I like Sweet Face," Christopher continued thinking to himself, "and I think it's cleverer than that way. In fact he's cleverer than this crow as far as that is concerned."

After a while they were all getting in each other's way so much that Willy Nilly said:

"Now you have all helped me a great deal but I do not go out and have some fresh air. It's not so cold and I can finish quickly."

"Let's go to the work shop Santa built," suggested Top Notch, after they had played out-of-doors for some time. But after a while they all had something they wanted to do except Sweet Face who decided to take a rest. It was anything but a rest as it turned out!

Politics at Random

By SYRON PRICE

(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

APPARENTLY it will be a long time before politicians reach any sort of agreement as to the political consequences of the gold decision.

The supreme court's pronouncement was greeted with real jubilation among many supporters of the Roosevelt administration. It soon developed, however, that opinion was far from unanimous.

One democrat holding high office privately expressed the view that the court's language in declaring abrogation of the gold clause invalid, as applied to federal government bonds, might have wide repercussions in future political discussion.

The immediate effects will begin to show, of course, when, and if, pending inflationary proposals come up for active consideration in congress. The alignments developed by such a debate will be most interesting.

It will be in the 1936 presidential campaign, however, that the issue will emerge into the open—granting that it ever does.

Some Saw Confusion

THE concern with which administration politicians looked forward to the court decision was quite patent. They foresaw the greatest confusion if the justices let the administration down, and they were not at all certain where they would come out of such a situation.

Criticism Interpreted

THAT is one conception of it. The other is that while the administration won a technical victory, it lost caste in that the court declared it had attained its ends by unconstitutional and regrettable methods.

To those who feel so, the court simply has said to Mr. Roosevelt and to congress: "You have done wrong, but this time you escape through a loophole in the law. Next time, watch your step."

One suggestion advanced on capitol hill is that those who contend they actually have lost by dollar devaluation, plus those who are stirred by altruistic resentment over what they call "repudiation," may be swayed by the court's action into a bloc of appreciable political power.

The possibilities of the strong phrases of Justice McReynolds' dissenting opinion, properly transcribed and circulated as a campaign document, are not overlooked by those who hold such a view.

They think much could be made of a supreme court justice's terse protest: "The constitution is gone."

Future Decisions Count

MUCH may depend, of course, on what the court itself does hereafter.

Other New Deal legislation is coming up for judgment. NRA is next in order.

If the court now generally approves the other things done under Mr. Roosevelt's leadership, the gold decision may pass out of the political picture. If criticism continues to come from the highest tribunal of the land, however, the President's opponents may be expected to capitalize the situation fully.

Talks to parents

By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH

ALL children do not like the same books, and there is no reason to suppose that because Susy enjoyed a certain type of story her young brother, Tommy, will like it too.

Susy may revel in tales of horror and ask for stories of blood and thunder, full of giants and bogey beasts. Tommy, though a boy, and therefore presumably attuned to stronger fare than his more delicate-minded sister, may turn with aversion from gruesome tales and prefer a more commonplace and less hair-raising mental diet.

Choosing books for children is different for each case, and parents and teachers who wish to interest youngsters in literature must choose with care the special type of book suited to each child, allowing no preconception of what they think the child should read to influence them.

Mary, for example, had read Scott through by the time she was 13, but refused to look at Dickens after one taste of his novels. John absorbed Dickens with gusto but was thumbs down on Scott. Thomas would read neither and puzzled his literary parents with his apparent aversion to good books until they found that he could browse for hours in poetry and prose. Henry was all for history and science and scorned light literature.

Feeding the brain is like feeding the body. All children do not like the same foods. Left to themselves they will stuff on sweets and candy. Somehow a good, solid diet must be found and they must be trained to eat it, but so long as it is nourishing and balanced it need not be identical for every child.

Most children if left unguided will read only trash, and the brain can no more develop on a diet made exclusively of detective stories and light periodicals than the body can on desserts and sweet-meats.

New York, Feb. 27 (AP).—The stock market tried to rally under the influence of a little more affable attitude toward the rails today, but after reading mid-week trade statistics traders turned a cold shoulder on the industrials.

Steels bore the brunt of a moderate mid-day selling flurry in shares. Bethlehem and Republic preferred issues were off a point or more and declines of substantial fractions appeared in Bethlehem Common, U. S. Steel and American Rolling Mill. Loans of a point or more also dropped in duPont, Johns-Manville, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, American Commercial Alcohol and Western Union. Chrysler and American Can lost major fractions and General Motors nearly as much. Some of the aircraft and oil shares sagged moderately but silver issues were firm in sympathy with the market for the metal. A few of the rails, such as New Haven, Santa Fe and Illinois Central retained moderate gains.

May Have Been a Man.

London, Feb. 27 (AP).—A theory that the human legs found in a tail was such at Waterloo Station may have been that of a man machine riding as a woman introduced a bizarre angle into England's latest disappearance mystery today.

Sir Bernard Spillars, celebrated medical expert, advanced this theory with the explanation that there were indications the flesh of the legs had been whitened with powder and that their hair had been removed. The legs were apparently crumpled and the instep arched. Sir Bernard said, as though deflected from weaving a woman's name, that the legs were found in a tail.

HOME BUILDERS' AND OWNERS' PAGE

REMODELING AND
NEW CONSTRUCTIONInterior Changes Add Conveniences
Allow Utilization Of Wasted Space

Interior remodeling may be done for a number of reasons, any one of which may be fully justified. Among these is a desire of the property owner to add convenience and utilize wasted space, as well as enhance the appearance or value of the home. Suggestions for the home owner's approach to this character of work are given by building experts of the Southern Pine Association, as follows:

In making interior changes in the character or size of any room, it is necessary, of course, that the owner have a definite purpose in mind, as, for instance, to enlarge or reduce the size of the room for greater convenience of the occupants; to remove some antiquated, or unhandy, or undesirable feature; to make use of otherwise wasted space; to improve the lighting or ventilation of the room; to insure greater quiet or privacy, as in the case of a den, study or library, or for some other good reason.

"Frequently a room may be enlarged by removing a wall into a hallway, by eliminating a closet or ugly projection, by adding a bay window, or taking out a partition, or by combining some unused waste space into the main room. It probably can be made smaller by dividing it into two rooms by putting in a partition or arched opening, or by adding contour of the room.

"In planning and making such changes, it is well to eliminate all but the essential things, such as furniture or equipment, which the owner desires to have in the room. The room then can be remodeled with its contents and the purposes for which it is to be used kept distinctly in mind, so that the alterations will bring satisfaction and will not result in an inharmonious job.

"In adding windows or doors to improve the lighting, ventilation or convenience of a room, their proper location should be determined after consideration of the appearance such openings will present and whether or not they will interfere with the placing of the furniture or equipment of the room."

The experts also give the caution that interior remodeling which involves structural changes, removal of walls, elimination of posts or other supports of any part of the structure, should not be undertaken without competent advice as to the effect such changes might have on the strength of the house, and to insure that the changes conform with sound construction practices.

Housing Hints

Tips on How and What to Improve

Stairs Beautify

Sidewalks, drain pipes and front stairs, built of sturdy wood, stone or cement invariably play their part in making the house look well cared for.

Mirror For Bedroom

Full-length mirrors are steadily gaining popularity in the modern home. A logical location for such a convenience is the bedroom side of the bedroom closet door. This addition to home comfort is not attended by great expense and also suggests spaciousness in the bedroom.

Double Outlet Aids

A good general rule to follow in placing convenience outlets in a room is to have a double outlet between any two doors between which a piece of furniture is located. It is also found advisable to have at least one outlet in each wall of the room.

Shut Faucets Slowly

When water pressure is high, avoid shutting off the stream with a jerk. Close faucets slowly.

Balanced Dining Room

Using Wood to Achieve Atmosphere.

(Design 102-Copyright by Southern Pine Association.)

A dining room can have pleasant order and balance without being stiff or cold. In this instance of remodeling, wood is used to soften and warm the atmosphere of a room that originally was "fussy" and rather forbidding in its bad taste, as indicated in the small "Before" sketch. Some degree of formality is given by the very simple use of boards and moldings in their proper structural place—rather than as mere decoration.

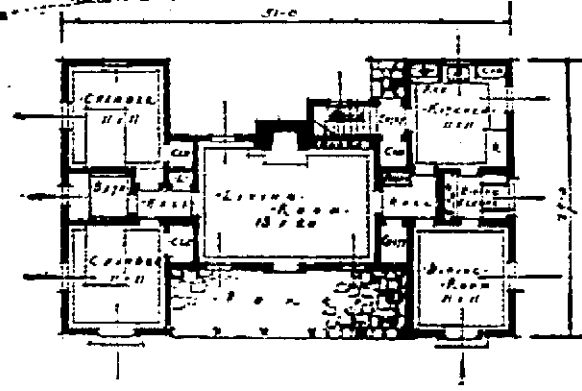

The finish on these walls and ceilings may be very light natural wood, contrasting harmoniously with the Venetian blinds, trim and doors, painted solid and also light in color. A dark floor and carpet will catch the beautiful reflections in contrast. The top of the recessed shelves at the end of the room is a removable glass panel concealing electric bulbs so that the china and glass serve as an important decorative feature of the scheme.

Southern pine is particularly well adapted for all the woodwork necessary for transforming this room from its previous forbidding appearance into an attractive, comfortable dining room. A glance at the "before" and "after" sketches will show how this transformation can be accomplished in an economical manner.

(Editor's Note: Copy of "Southern Pine Book of Remodeling," containing 39 or more illustrated suggestions for interior and exterior remodeling and modernizing, and practical information on these subjects, will be sent free on request to Southern Pine Association, New Orleans, La.)

Wherever foundations or walls have settled through settlement or any other cause, repairs should be made at once in order to prevent more extensive damage.

When foundations rest on filled or soft earth, they are apt to settle unevenly in the course of time and cause the plaster, stucco or walls to crack.

To prevent this settling, it is advisable to test the bottom of the foundation excavation to determine the adequacy of the bearing surface to support the loads to which they may be subjected. Test pits or borings will reveal the character of the earth beneath the footings and indicate the depth to which the excavations should be carried.

Public Demands
Housing Books

The demand for Government publications dealing with problems in the modernization and construction of homes has greatly increased, according to an analysis made by the Federal Housing Administration of the weekly sales of publications during 1932 and 1933 compared with sales made since the Better Housing Program was put into effect.

The publications, which were prepared by various governmental departments, are made available to the public through the Superintendent of Documents of the Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., at very nominal prices to cover the cost of printing. Prices for the bulletins which have been so popular have ranged from 5 to 40 cents each.

The analysis indicates that sales of the various publications have increased from 100 to over 1,000 per cent.

The publication entitled, "How to Judge a House," was the most popular, followed closely by publications on "Chimneys and Fireplaces," "House Insulation," and "The Care and Repair of the House." Considerable interest was also manifested in the publication, "Injury to Buildings by Termites."

The publications on "Convenient Kitchens and Saving Fuel in Heating the House" have been in demand and indicate the interest of home owners in modern conveniences and economies.

Other publications which have greatly appealed to owners and prospective owners are: "Recommended Minimum Requirements for Small Dwelling Construction," "Floors and Floor Coverings," "How to Own Your Home," "Recommended Minimum Requirements for Fixtures," "Light Frame House Construction," "Painting on the Farm," "Simple Plumbing Repairs in the Home," and "Farm Home Conveniences."

There was also a demand for publications dealing with beautifying and planning farmsteads, city home and farm gardens, lighting protection and fire-protective construction, home laundering, and the like.

TIMBER CONNECTORS
SOLVE JOINT PROBLEM

The problem of designing a joint strong enough to develop the full strength of the members entering it when lumber is the structural material, has been "almost entirely solved" by use of modern timber connectors and plywood as gusset material.

It was found that the effective strength of the structure was increased from two and one-half to as much as six times that attained in the old-fashioned, bolted joints. The tests further showed the "surprisingly high load-carrying capacities of the plywood used with timber connectors and indicated that further investigation which would develop accurate data for the use of engineers was necessary and advisable."

Beware Hammering Pipes.

Rattling or hammering noises in plumbing is a danger sign. Such symptoms, if neglected, may cause serious trouble and unnecessary expense.

Surveys Reveal U. S. Tenants Now
Willing to Pay For Repairs In Rent

Better Housing surveys in widely divergent sections of the nation have revealed a willingness on the part of tenants to pay higher rents, provided certain greatly needed repairs and improvements are made on the properties they occupy.

Such an attitude is most prevalent among that class of renters who, until recent years, were owners of their own homes, and also by that large portion of the population who are definitely "home-loving" but live in rented property because of the transient nature of their occupations.

Over a wide territory the consensus of surveys was that the majority of tenants have a definite consciousness of the value of property, the sources of depreciation and the value of protecting property from deterioration. The average renter takes the position that it is not only his best interest but also that of the landlord to keep the properties in a constant state of repair.

"Build-Dry"

Plywood Used for Home Wall Interiors

One of the greatest single factors in the stimulation of winter building and repair work, which is being urged by construction and labor leaders, is the "build-dry" idea, as it is known to architects and builders.

Materials used for this method of construction include pre-fabricated interior wall coverings. Plywood, one of these coverings, comes in broad sheets as large as 48 by 36 inches, ready to nail to studs. It may be installed rapidly at a minimum of cost and may be finished immediately, since it is a dry material. Thus it saves considerable time and makes possible earlier occupancy of the building.

Plywood comes in a variety of woods and sizes, its thickness varying from 3-16 of an inch in three-ply to 1-2 inches in seven-ply as shown in "Commercial Standard CS45-31" and "Commercial Standards CS45-31," issued by the Bureau of Standards of the Department of Commerce.

The method of manufacture makes this material practically split-proof and warp-proof, the grain in each piece of wood being placed at right angles to the grain in the adjacent piece when the various plies, or layers, are glued together. It works easily, can be quickly sawn by hand or power, is light in weight, yet strong.

Plywood is easily cut into panels of practically any size for wood-paneled walls. When used in large sheets, it is possible to obtain any kind of wood paneled effect by nailing inexpensive molding to the sheets. The wood surface is susceptible to practically any kind of a finish—natural, stained, painted—or it may be covered with wallpaper.

Killing Knots

Troublesome knots in exposed wood are killed by the application of a hot iron, a scraping, and two coatings of gold or silver leaf before painting.

Proper Care Can Prevent House Settling

Cracking of walls in a house or any other structure is caused most frequently by settling of the foundations, which usually can be prevented by proper precaution.

Where foundations rest on filled or soft earth, they are apt to settle unevenly in the course of time and cause the plaster, stucco or walls to crack.

To prevent this settling, it is advisable to test the bottom of the foundation excavation to determine

PATTERN 5261

Dress up your wardrobe for spring by using new neckwear and see what a transformation will result! The bow effect and bib collar are in a simple mesh-like stitch—you can do them in petit boucle or string. The bib collar gets fluff around the edge as it ends up in three small ruffles, two in colors contrasting to the collar. The lacy double-tiered collar has many possibilities. It's in a very simple open design—a lacy lace that is very flattering to the wearer. You can wear it as shown—it fastens in the back or front, as you choose. By starching it—it's made of a finer cotton than string—you can make the top ruffle stand up stiffly—a very smart arrangement.

In pattern 5261 you will find complete instructions for making the collar shown; an illustration of them and of the stitches needed; material requirements and color arrangements.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to the Kingston Daily Freeman Household Arts Dept., 253 W. 14th street, New York, N. Y.

My Beauty Hint

By ALICE BROOKS

Do not overexpose. Many women, impressed with the importance of exercise, become too enthusiastic in their attempts. Among the results are fatigue lines in the face.

CROCHET—A DOMINANT THEME IN SPRING FASHION

THE new 'Eiffel tower' silhouette—a tiered skirt gradually widening toward the hem in a manner reminiscent of the Eiffel tower's form—marks this spring evening frock from 'Petits Docks.' The frock of rosy beige and black checked cotton madras is topped by a black 'lace' jacket with a 'Negro rose' tarleton flower on the bodice. The gloves are knitted green silk with a bright rose appliqued on the back.

Crochet, a fashion headliner for some time, continues to be a leader for Spring. Foreign cables stress its importance—and clever American women are enjoying the vogue for doing crochet and turning out their own fashionable accessories.

The lacy blouse photographed is especially good for Spring wear, and is definitely smart anywhere it is worn. The draped cowl neckline, the loose bell sleeves, and its new hip length, point to an adaptable and practical fashion. It is most effective in two colors or two shades of the same color, and either wool or string is correct for its lacy stitch. This model is an exclusive Alice Brooks design, and complete instructions for making it are included in Pattern Y5256. To obtain Pattern Y5256 send 10 cents to Kingston Daily Freeman, Household Arts Department, 253 West 14th Street, New York, N. Y.

BARBARA BELL FASHION PATTERNS

Pattern No. 1602-B

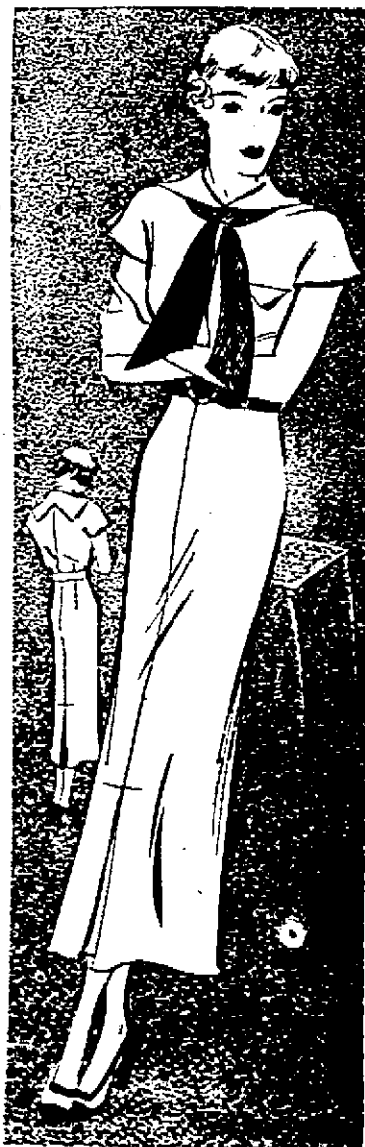

New Trends in Cruise Frocks

Summer wardrobes need ever so many types of cotton, linen, and tub-silk clothes to make them interesting. Up to now, the dependable stand-by for most of us has been the shirtwaist dress, which, this year, is meeting competition in the cruise frocks.

The slim little model sketched is fashioned with simple lines that hug the figure where they should and draw upon their reserve hemline pleats when necessary. Central seamings are part of the tailored mode, and in this frock they achieve added smartness in the slash at the neckline made to be worn in more ways than one. Collars do unexpected things at the back, this season. Note the diverting cut of this one. Dropped shoulder seams give smooth, wide lines at the top, and bi-colored ties make a change from prints. Effective combinations are gotten from two contrasting Windsor ties adjusted at the right length and joined in a seam at the back.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1602-B is designed in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20 and 40. Corresponding measurements 20, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Sizes 16 (34) requires about 2 1/4 yards of 36 inch material; 1 1/4 yard each of two contrasting colors for tie. (Two purchased ties, optional.)

Tomorrow: Misses frock fashioned in print.

MODES OF THE MOMENT

Plaids and stripes stage a "comeback" in spring sports wear.
Liana Merwin

The clever combining of plaids and stripes with monotone fabrics is prevalent in the new sport costumes for town and country wear. While there is a definite contrast in these combinations, harmony of color is carried out in a beautiful manner. Intricate cutting and seaming enliven the tailored models, bringing forth unusual necklines, shoulder treatments and sleeve details. Buttons are a trimming detail of note and the ascot tie is smart.

The swanky two-piece costume at left uses striped tweed in brown and beige with a monotone skirt of brown. The square cut shoulder treatment is different and the patch pockets are self trimmed. A gold color ascot scarf finishes the neckline. A reversed idea is used on the dress at right—a monotone top with a flecked plaid skirt. Raglan shoulders, plaid collar detail and ascot scarf trim the upper part of the long tunic. Large self covered buttons fasten the side in a novel manner. The plaid skirt is plainly tailored with a kick pleat at back.

Both of these models are extremely chic and just the thing for the sharp days of early spring.

Motion Picture Bills Seem Swamped Today

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 27 (AP)—Bills calling for stricter censorship and new taxes on motion pictures and advertising today were belittled swamped under a wave of opposition from organized labor, theatre owners, producers and newspapers. Representatives of the four groups voiced their opposition at a public hearing before the senate education committee yesterday and no one appeared to dispute their arguments.

The bills, sponsored by Senator John T. McCall of New York and Assemblyman Anthony Canney of Buffalo, both Democrats, would drive theatre owners bankrupt and "muzzle the public," members of the committee were told.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—"When you get burned, you stay burned. When you freeze, you have a chance of getting warm again."

Ordeal by fire, or ordeal by ice—your Hollywood stunt man prefers the latter. Harvey Parry, one of the foremost, will take the frigid test of courage any day.

When William Wellman, directing "The Call of the Wild," took Clark Gable, Loretta Young, Jack Oakie and others of the company up to Mt. Baker in Washington, he went in search of snow and found more than he wanted. The party was snowed out of one of the state's severest storms. But they got the picture despite all that, and Harvey Parry, his partner William "Duke" Green, and Johnny Collins, the three stunt men, not only lived to tell the tale but actually thawed out.

Down Three Times! They had to capsize a canoe in sub-zero weather, take a ducking, and do it twice more because something went wrong the first time. Then there was the scene in which the trio—doubling for the stars—had to wade out waist-deep in the ice-covered stream. The wading was to start as a walk on the ice, but the script called for Loretta (doubled by Parry wearing a wig) to fall in a hole and be immersed before her rescue by Gable. Just a few things like that, in water with the weather 15 degrees below zero.

Stunt men, contrary to a prevalent notion, will not do anything. The smart ones will do anything they know they can do. They keep in training. Parry, Green and Collins prepared for the icy ducking by coating their bodies not with the customary goose grease but with automobile cup grease. It irritates the skin and causes the blood to race faster. Over this coating went long woolen underwear, then another coat of grease, and then their clothes. Even so, the first shock of immersion is something to stop a weak heart.

No Time To Drink "When you're getting ready," is Parry's advice to anyone who wants to try it, "don't take a drink to warm up. And after you are all done, not before, take one little drink. A big one will work the heart too fast."

All three men, back in Hollywood, were at work on "stunts" for other pictures in short order. Stunt men get paid by the job. Parry, who hates hospitals and has been in one only twice in his 15 years of stunting, taped up an injured side and did a fight, then a climbing stunt, and several other jobs. His side was hurt when he was thrown against rocks in the rapids, capsize that canoe. It was "nothing," he said.

"But there's nothing you can do about a fire stunt. You just have to risk getting burned and staying burned," he said. "You can freeze, and get warm again. I'll take ice."

Real tornadoes were comparatively few and far between during 1934, says the weather bureau's annual tornado summary.

California Marital Tangle Goes Behind Closed Doors in Court

Los Angeles, Feb. 27 (AP).—Possibility of another hearing behind closed doors was seen today as new sessions loomed in the embittered Emerson-Sewell marital muddle.

Superior Judge Ben Lindsay, not a marital authority, took a witness, principals and attorneys into his private office yesterday when one part of the testimony reached a point which demanded privacy. The same procedure may be taken today as new chapters in the tangled love affair of the four principals are unfolded.

The four are Walter Emerson, actor-writer, who is suing his wife for divorce, naming Barton Sewell, wealthy Beverly Hills sportsman, as co-respondent; Mrs. Jane Scholtz Emerson, who is suing Emerson for alimony and custody of their three children, naming Mrs. Sewell as co-respondent; Mrs. Sewell, who is suing Mrs. Emerson for $100,000 alienation of her husband's affections.

As yet, Sewell hasn't sued anyone. Mrs. Scholtz, mother of Mrs. Emerson, was on the witness stand yesterday and was asked to repeat an alleged telephone conversation she had several months ago with her son-in-law. At this point Judge Lindsay interrupted the case and ordered the testimony recited in his private chambers.

The names of Olive Borden, screen actress; Edna Wallace Hopper, actress and beauty culture expert; and Gertrude Vanderbilt, stage actress, were brought into the case yesterday when Burt McMurtree, former broadcasting company official and friend of Emerson, took the stand.

He said Emerson visited him in New York last June and that the actor "went out" with the three women during his stay.

Mrs. Scholtz testified that she advanced $6,250 to Emerson three weeks after he married her daughter to settle a heart-balm suit, supposedly brought in 1923 by Suzette Tobey, former dancing partner of Emerson.

Miss Tobey, apparently waiting to be called as a witness against Emerson, has been in court for several days with Mrs. Emerson.

Details of a beach party last November, when Emerson and Sewell allegedly "swapped wives" for the night were given by Everett P. (Red) Davis, investigator in the district attorney's office and a guest at the party.

"I awoke," he said "about 7:30 o'clock the following morning and made my way into the living room. I found Emerson sleeping in the day bed and I saw Mrs. Sewell lying alongside him."

His attorney urged him to continue.

"Well," Davis hesitated a moment. "I naturally glanced into the bedroom, where I saw Mrs. Emerson and Sewell in bed."

He added that he busied himself around the house, opening blinds and straightening the kitchen, until the two couples awoke.

New Car is Badly Damaged in Crash

A Hudson car, driven by John Halwick of Lake Katrine, a salesman for the Universal Road Machine Co., and a Chevrolet driven by Miss Catherine Moxon of 73 Cedar street, were in collision on 9-W near the Staten Island Inn about eight o'clock Tuesday night.

Halwick was driving to his home at Lake Katrine and Miss Moxon was coming out of the old road near the Inn. The Halwick car, according to the statement made to Justice Walter Webber, skidded on some ice as an attempt was made to avoid a collision and sideswiped the other car. Both cars were badly damaged, the worst damage being sustained by the Hudson. Miss Moxon's car was a new Standard Chevrolet coach, which she had purchased less than an hour before the accident from the Colonial City Chevrolet.

Huey's Legislature Passes More Laws

Baton Rouge, La., Feb. 27 (AP).—Soldiers with fixed bayonets guarded Huey Long's special session of the Legislature today as it speeded four score more of his laws to passage with a new acting lieutenant governor presiding over the Senate.

Eighty-seven measures were introduced with characteristic Huey Long gusto when the two houses met last night. The bills were sent to the House ways and means committee for consideration today.

For the first time in history National Guardsmen shouldered guns at the Assembly doors in Long's $5,000,000 skyscraper capitol. About 100 militiamen were on duty to preserve martial law declared after armed citizens uprising here several weeks ago.

Political circles were rocked last night when Thomas B. Wingate resigned as acting lieutenant-governor and president pro-tem of the Senate.

Senator James A. Noe, named to succeed him, declared he was "through" with politics after completing his term in those offices. Noe had been prominently mentioned as Long's candidate for governor next year.

Wingate, who is 65 years old, announced his resignation from a hospital bed in Shreveport, telling Gov. O. K. Allen he felt his illness made it impossible for him to continue. He retained his seat in the Senate, however.

Long's 87 bills, few of which apparently dealt with subjects of statewide interest, went into the legislative hopper with the same precision as those in three recent special sessions during which his power was strengthened.

The bills introduced in the last session, in December, also were apparently innocuous, but just before final passage Long put in amendments which gave him almost unheard-of powers in a Democratic state.

Marcus and Singer Released From Prison

Oasining, N. Y., Feb. 27 (AP).—Bernard K. Marcus, former president of the Bank of United States, and Saul Singer, former vice-president, convicted of misapplication of funds in connection with the collapse of the bank in 1930, were released from prison today on parole.

They had served less than two years of the indeterminate three to six years sentence imposed on them in June, 1931, for misapplying $2,009,518 of the funds of the Municipal Safe Deposit Company, a subsidiary of the Bank of United States.

Marcus was given $45 when he left the Wallkill State Medium Prison. Singer was handed $75.74 by the clerk at Sing Sing Prison.

Remarker Singer:

"It's the first time I've handled money in a long, long time."

The two men entered Sing Sing together on March 21, 1933, after two years of ineffectual appeals. Marcus was transferred to the Wallkill prison two weeks ago.

Singer was driven away from Sing Sing in an automobile by his son, Herbert, also an official of the bank. He was convicted with his father and Marcus. The son's conviction was reversed, however, at the time that those of the other two men were affirmed.

Neither of the men discussed their plans for the future. They were ordered on leaving prison to report to the state division of parole at 80 Centre street, New York city, within 24 hours.

MRS. REGENDAHL REPORTS SINGING TWO CATERPILLARS

Although Old Man Winter again nodded his head Tuesday night and two inches of snow fell, the fact remains that spring is not far away. For Tuesday afternoon Mrs. M. F. Regendahl of 22 Johnston avenue, glanced out of her kitchen window and saw two caterpillars crawling over the stone walk in the back yard. These are the first caterpillars to be reported seen this year.

Money Fire Near

The fire department was called out at 8 o'clock this morning for a chimney fire in the residence of William Turner, 114 Third avenue. There was no damage.

Chase Mellen, Jr. Says Spoils System Healthy

New York, Feb. 27 (AP).—Disavowing any devotion either to the "Jacksonian spoils system" or the "Farley spoils system," Chase Mellen, Jr., today nevertheless described patronage as the greatest lubricant of and for a political machine.

Mellen, New York county Republican leader, in an address to the Harvard Luncheon Club, also attacked the party stand-patters.

They, he said, are to blame for the Republicans' lost ground in New York state.

"The stand-patters," said Mellen, "refuse to believe there is anything the matter with party management. They resist the efforts of all who seek to modernize, liberalize and humanize the party. They believe that Democratic victories, like Topsy, 'just growed.'"

"They believe that the serum of liberalism, as distilled from the temper of the times, should be relegated to the laboratories where 'new-fangled ideas' can best gather cobwebs. Cobwebs, they argue, never hurt champagne in bottles, and a grubby bank is much easier to sit on than a hard, polished stone of fact."

Labeling his address "The trials and tribulations of a political leader," Mellen mentioned among them the demand for jobs by his followers when there were no jobs to give.

"Idealists may ring doorbells for a while," he went on, "but the sounds made by doorbells fall when one has to ring them 365 days a year, and to do it without hope of tangible reward, or even promise of reward."

"I do not belong to that school of politics which goes in for buying up hopes of applicants for jobs by making false promises," but it is difficult to be placed in the position of wanting to do something for a deserving and qualified applicant, and being unable to do it."

It is difficult to be placed in the position of wanting to do something for a deserving and qualified applicant, and being unable to do it."

Samuel Insull Hopes To Come Back, if Freed

By ROBERT M. YODER.

Associated Press Staff Writer.

(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press)

Chicago, Feb. 27.—Should Samuel Insull win his way through the criminal charges against him—he goes on trial again Monday—the one time public utility millionaire hopes to begin a come-back.

A job "with a maximum of work and a minimum of notoriety"—is the Insull ambition as described by Insull's son, Samuel, Jr. At 75, Insull wants to try something new, his son said, and is most interested now in manufacturing.

"He has had several offers," young Insull said, "but of course he can't consider anything until he has these trials cleared up."

Next to be tried is a charge of embezzlement brought against Insull in 1932 after the resounding collapse of his gigantic Middle West Utilities Company. The reduced millionaire must explain the transfer of $65,000 from company funds to a brokerage account operated by his brother, Martin John Insull.

Insull's time for several months has been occupied with preparing for this case. "Junior" said, and in rehearsing for his next appearance on the witness stand. The amount concerned is relatively trivial, compared to the Insull mail fraud trial, which involved a cool $140,000,000. But conviction would carry a penitentiary sentence of from one to 14 years.

Under the guidance of Attorney Alfred E. Thompson, who saw him through federal court in the mail fraud trial, Insull is expected to use the same defense. He will admit the transactions under fire, but tell the jury "I did it to save the ship."

That defense won an acquittal for Insull just before Thanksgiving and another for his brother, Martin, just before Christmas. Because the new case is relatively simple, lawyers believe Insull's trial can be concluded in two weeks.

Witnesses Are At Home

Callender, Ont., Feb. 27 (AP).—Olive and Elsie Dinnon, parents of the famed quinquennial, came home to their 10 children early today after a week-long tour in the United States. A relative drove them out over the snow-covered roads to the Dinnon home. Later in the day they were expected to visit the hospital nursing where their quinquennial daughter lies.

Europa, Other Ships Abandon Search For Stricken Freighter

New York, Feb. 27 (AP).—Radio Marine Corporation received word today that the giant liner Europa and two other ships had abandoned their search in a Mid-Atlantic gale for the freighter Blairgowrie, which had reported she was sinking yesterday.

The Olympic, another big liner, was due at the scene three hours later and was asked to make a final search for the vessel as it passed by.

None of the masters of the three ships which hung at the scene throughout the night had any hope that the Blairgowrie survived the hurricane which was raging.

The last report was that it was turning over.

Twenty-eight men were aboard the Blairgowrie, which had given its position as about 1,000 miles east of Newfoundland. She left Swansea, Wales, ten days ago for Boston.

The Europa, from New York, headed for European ports. The other ships to resume their courses were the American Banker, combination passenger-cargo craft, London to New York, and the S. S. Bloomer, Rotterdam to New York.

One by one various ships damaged by the storms were struggling into port or waiting for the high winds to abate before trying to proceed.

The S. S. Karma was standing by the British steamer Hilcroft and attempting to place a tow line on board the craft, helpless since its propeller was wrenched away in towering seas.

The freighter Europa found refuge from the storm's fury in the port of El Ferrol, Spain, and the British S. S. Orling arrived at Brest, France.

The San Melito, also of British registry, was beating its way back to England for repairs; the Italian Caterina Madre was under tow; and the Greek Elythia Vergotti was being conveyed toward Brest.

His First Voyage.

Glasgow, Feb. 27 (AP).—Capt. H. A. Preston of Glasgow was the master of the British freighter Blairgowrie, believed to have been sunk in the North Atlantic during the night. All the vessel's mates and engineers, and part of the crew, were from Glasgow. One, a youthful apprentice, was making his first sea voyage. The total on board was given as 28.

ITALY GLORIES IN POTENTIAL STRENGTH FOR DEFENSES

Rome, Feb. 27 (AP).—Italy gloried today in the assurance that seven or eight million of her countrymen can be rallied to the colors in event of the nation's need.

Premier Mussolini's announcement that there need be no concern the dispatch of troops to Africa would weaken the country's military strength attracted enthusiastic attention in the press.

Meanwhile, the loading of men and materials for the colonial expeditionary force went energetically forward. Hundreds of tons of war materials poured through the hatches of the S. S. Arabia at Naples in preparation for its sailing for Eritrea before midnight.

Six other vessels constituting Italy's bridge to East Africa already are en route, conveying contingents totaling about 15,000 men.

The government statement emphasizing the strength of Italy's military establishment disclosed that two new army divisions are being organized to replace the two mobilized for African service as a result of the controversy with Ethiopia.

Orders also have been given factories, it was announced, for arms and ammunition to replenish the nation's military stores.

Brink Held For The Grand Jury

Charged With Third Degree Burglary Allegedly Stealing Beer From The Brusten Distributing Company on Field Court.

The case of Frederick Brink, 26, of 88 Pearl street, who was arrested Sunday night, February 10, for third degree burglary, was heard in city court this morning, and Assistant City Judge Walter H. Gill held him for the grand jury, fixing bail at $1,000.

Brink, together with Raymond Smith, 24, of 20 Elizabeth street, and Raymond Dufols, 26, of 189 Elmendorf street, was arrested by Patrolman Ernest Boss at the DuBois home. The trio and beer they allegedly stole from the Brusten Distributing Company on Field Court were taken to police headquarters.

The arrest was made by Officer Boss on instructions from Sergeant James V. Simpson, who had been notified that a burglary had been committed at the Brusten place. The person giving the information stated the men were seen walking toward Elmendorf street, carrying the beer. There were two cases of beer and one of Guinness's stout.

Officer Boss was called to the witness stand this morning and testified as to the arrest and delivering the prisoners to Sergeant Simpson at police headquarters.

Officer Fred Stoudt, secretary to Chief of Police J. Allan Wood, who typed a statement made by Brink to Sergeant Charles Phinney, the day after his arrest, testified as to the information on the paper in which Brink stated he helped carry the beer. He made no admission of having taken part in any burglary. The officer said Brink read the paper and signed it, willingly without any influence on the part of the police.

Attorney Lloyd R. LeFevre, representing Brink, moved that the statement be disregarded as it was irrelevant and immaterial in that it in no way had any bearing on the burglary charge against his client.

Max Brusten of the distributing concern also was on the stand and was questioned by Attorney LeFevre and Attorney Louis G. Bruhn of the district attorney's office, who represented the police.

Attorney LeFevre moved to dismiss the charge against Brink, contending that the police failed to prove facts in the crime charged. The value of the beer had not been considered for one thing, he pointed out, no evidence was shown charging Brink with stealing the beer and no proof was offered concerning any knowledge on his part in planning the burglary, he said.

Judge Gill took a five-minute recess before rendering his decision to hold Brink for the grand jury.

"I don't see how Brink, who only carried the beer, can be held for the grand jury on such flimsy evidence. Any one in the court room could understand that," said LeFevre.

"I have made my decision," said Judge Gill.

"I don't see how, when the People presented such a meagre, lousy case," retorted LeFevre, who was admonished by the judge for his statement.

Several Features For K. of C. Ball

The entertainment committee under the chairmanship of J. David Schenck which has charge of the program for the 16th annual charity ball of the local council of Knights of Columbus to be held at the auditorium on Friday evening, announced today that in communication with Alfred Skea of New York city, word was received that Mr. Skea through his booking agency was bringing to Kingston several additional features to the program already announced. The program headed by Frances West and Company, sensational adagio artists direct from Radio City Music Hall, Arthur Rogers, noted American baritone, Grant and Kask, feature dancers, Willard and Black, Anita Jakob, acrobatic surprise, and others with five numbers by the star pupils of the Cushing School of Dancing, is expected to provide an evening of delightful entertainment.

The patron committee through its chairman, Allen A. Baker, asks that those receiving patron tickets make a prompt return, so that proper credit may be given, and that the work of the charity fund may go on, as the proceeds of the ball are spent entirely for non-sectarian charity.

Florian P. Wingert, faithful navigator of the Fourth Degree Assembly, announced that the members of the assembly who wish to procure a social baldric to wear on that evening, may get same at the K. of C. building.

The public is again urged to patronize the annual charity ball on Friday evening, as along with an evening of good entertainment and continuous music for dancing, the charity work of the local council which is widely known most as one, as the need is still here, and must be attended to. Only by public response can this be accomplished.

Dempsey Retiring As A Policeman

After rounding out 22 years as a member of the Kingston police force, Officer Arthur J. Dempsey the first of the month will retire on a pension. His resignation as a policeman was accepted at the last meeting of the police board.

Policeman Dempsey became a member of the police department in 1913, after serving two years as a member of the Kingston fire department. He has been in ill health for about a year, which led to his decision to retire from active duty.

During the years that he has served as a member of the police force he has made many friends, and had proven one of the more efficient officers in the department, an officer of unquestioned courage and ability.

Ruth Enthusiastic Over New Job; Will Be Assistant To McKechnie

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Writer)
New York, Feb. 27 (AP)—Babe Ruth, filled with enthusiasm by the deal which shifts him from the New York Yankees and the American League to the Boston Braves and the rival National League as a player, assistant club manager and vice president, talked confidently today of another big comeback.

"I ought to be able to play at least 100 games for the Braves this year," he declared. "I never felt better. I'm down to weight now—around 230—and if my legs hold out, I hope to do my part toward helping by old friend, Bill McKechnie, land the Boston club up somewhere in the National League race."

"I know it's a tough league right now. Some of the pitching, like the Deans and Hubbell, will be plenty hard to crack, but I will welcome a chance to see what I can do."

"I used to like hitting in the Polo Grounds and from what I've seen or heard, some of the other fences around the National League will look like home to me again. Maybe we will have some fun."

"I'm tickled to death with this chance, not only because it sends me back to an old home town, Boston, but because it gives me the best chance for a real future in the major leagues."

"I hope to play as long and as often as I can—maybe two or three years more—but I also feel I can now look forward to a happy connection with the game, when my playing days are over."

All this from the man who was supposed to be "all washed up" after hobnobbing through the finishing stages of his last season with the Yankees, who flatly declared, afterward, that his playing days were over, and who threatened to quit baseball unless he got a job as a big league manager.

Within less than a week after his return from a world tour, during which he startled the natives of Japan and the Philippines with his long-distance hitting, Ruth was persuaded to accept the one opportunity that holds forth prospect of fulfilling his managerial ambitions.

He will serve this year as first assistant to William B. McKechnie, veteran leader of the Braves since 1930, but he has the assurance of Emil E. Fuchs, president of the Boston club, that he will be considered as field manager for 1936—if the circumstances warrant and such a chance is "mutually" satisfactory.

McKechnie is slated to become general manager of the Braves, if and when he is ready to yield the field reins to the famous slugger.

The one-time orphan boy of Baltimore thus moves back under dramatic circumstances to the town where he first gained major league baseball fame and where, as a figure still idolized by American fandom, he will help attempt the financial salvation of a club that, only a month or so ago, was in danger of becoming the orphan on the National League's doorstep.

The deal by which Ruth's American League career ends after 21 years climaxes a gallant fight by Fuchs to put the Braves back on their feet.

Although they were given reluctantly in one or two cases, waivers on Ruth were obtained from the other American League clubs.

The Boston Club did not pay a cent for Ruth's release, thereby disposing of reports that Ruppert would demand substantial payment if he let the Babe go for any position except that of a full-fledged manager.

Ruth's agreement with the Braves—for a three-year period—calls for him to sign a straight playing contract at a flat salary, reported to be $25,000. Under a separate contract he will receive a percentage of the club profits.

He also has the privilege of becoming a part-owner by purchasing club stock "at a reasonable figure," but Fuchs remarked he would not advise the Babe to buy into the Braves until such time as Ruth felt he wanted to cast his future definitely with the organization.

National Leaguers without exception hailed the acquisition of Ruth as a ten-stroke for the senior circuit as well as for the Braves in their struggle for home-town patronage against the rise of the Red Sox.

Even though the Babe's playing days are numbered, club owners believe his mere presence in the Braves' lineup will revive popular interest in the big fellow and attract attention to his exploits in new surroundings.

He is assured a royal welcome on his return to Boston, where he was famous as a southpaw pitching ace of the Red Sox before being sold to the Yankees 15 years ago for $125,000.

Without the Babe, the Yankees and the Yankee Stadium—famed as "the house that Ruth built"—will seem like Hamlet without the Dane. Many critics said Ruth hurt the Yankees last season.

But to the hundreds of thousands who have swarmed into the huge stadium to see the big fellow on the pitcher's mound, the move into the right-field bleachers—"Ruthville" to kids and grownups who idolized the slugger—it won't be the same.

Without losing a set, Brooklyn's Hall of New York, Bryan Whitney Grant of Atlanta, Robert Jeffery Brown of Chattanooga, J. Gilbert Hall of South Orange, N. J., Jack McDermid of Texas and Eugene W. Kullie of Toronto breezed through the second round yesterday.

Bryan was the only one of the group to lose more than four games, as defeated H. C. Smith, Bermuda 2-4.

Managers Hail Ruth; 'Just What the Braves Need' Says McKechnie

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 27 (AP)—With mingled emotions—about equal portions of glee and trepidation—National League managers scattered about Florida welcomed into their circle today the one and only Babe Ruth, the portly gentleman who has had them tearing out their hair and groaning aloud at various world series times in his 20 years as an American Leaguer.

The glee came with the acquisition by the Boston Braves of the greatest drawing card in baseball's history, and no one questions that regardless of his 40 years, his bowed tendons and spavins, his balloon beltline and wheezing bellows, the bambino is still the greatest turnstile lure of them all.

The trepidation came with the realization that now they've got to face him for a large part of 164 games a year instead of a few now and then in annual post-season duels. "Too old to hit?" muttered Casey Stengel, manager of the Dodgers, as he chewed the situation over thoughtfully. "Say, we haven't ever gotten him completely out yet, have we? He hits National League pitching like he owned it, doesn't he?"

"I've got just one hope. He shouldn't go round our league calling his shots like he did against the Cubs in Chicago in 1932. Hit? He'll always be able to hit. He can slip plenty far and still be better than most of the right fielders in our league."

Boss McKechnie, whom Ruth will assist in the management of the club, and Bill Torrey, manager of the Giants, were "tickled to death" about the whole thing. McKechnie, in St. Petersburg, said the Babe was just what the Braves need—a distance driver and a good attraction.

McKechnie quickly dissipated any idea that might be lingering around that Ruth is to replace him as manager. "I'm only too happy to welcome him as my assistant," he said. "I sat in on the discussions over the last six weeks, and it's a wonderful thing, not only for the Braves, but for the league. I have a complete understanding with the club. I know the Babe will play his full share of games. He may play right field regularly, or I may give him the chance he has always wanted to play first base. We'll decide that when he gets down here and I have a talk with him. I won't know until tomorrow when he plans to report."

At the Armory Monday night, Battery A routed the Gascons soft ball team by the score of 19-6. This makes five straight wins for the soldiers who have already defeated the Meb's Clubs of the Fair Street, Holy Cross, Clinton Avenue and Connelly churches. Cosello and Coons got three base hits for the winners and both teams featured with double plays.

Next Monday night the Port Ewen Fire Department will attempt to put a stop to Battery A's winning streak.

Harridge Sorry Ruth Left American League

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 27 (AP)—William Harridge, president of the American League, arrived here today with Mrs. Harridge for a short vacation and expressed himself as sad indeed over the departure of Babe Ruth from the American League.

"No one knows how sorry I am to see him go," he said. "But what could we do? We had nothing to offer him, and he richly deserves the chance he is getting to enter another phase of one of the greatest careers in baseball history."

"It is impossible to say in words what Ruth has meant to baseball and the American League. I wish him all the success in the National League that he had with us. Our loss is their gain. He'll mean a great deal to them, both in playing strength and as a gate attraction."

Hamilton, Bermuda, Feb. 27 (AP)—The battle for the tennis championships of Bermuda had taken on the complexion of an United States affair today with only a sprinkling of some players left in the competition.

Without losing a set, Brooklyn's Hall of New York, Bryan Whitney Grant of Atlanta, Robert Jeffery Brown of Chattanooga, J. Gilbert Hall of South Orange, N. J., Jack McDermid of Texas and Eugene W. Kullie of Toronto breezed through the second round yesterday.

Bryan was the only one of the group to lose more than four games, as defeated H. C. Smith, Bermuda 2-4.

Woman's Christian
Temperance Union

The February meeting of the Kingston W. C. T. U. was held in St. James Methodist Church Thursday, February 21. The President, Mrs. George Shultz, announced that the Regional Conference would be held on March 27, in the Clinton Avenue Methodist Church. The guest speaker on that occasion is to be Mrs. D. Leigh Colvin of New York, state president. Mrs. John Stokete was asked to report on the recent meeting in the Governor Clinton Hotel, which she did, telling of Mayor Heilmann's plans for changing the city charter and bringing it up to the present day demands. He spoke at that time of the city manager form of government and advised those present to become better informed about this.

At the conclusion of the business session of the Union, excerpts from Mrs. D. Leigh Colvin's annual message were given. One was: "The goal of the W. C. T. U. is total abstinence for the individual and prohibition for the state and the nation. Simply because the nation was influenced by the triple alliance of predatory wealth, organized crime and debased politics which made common cause for gain to repeal national prohibition, and because repeal was put over by an untried method of questioned legality, with less than 25 per cent of those eligible voting—these are no reasons why our organization should abandon their efforts in behalf of the prohibition of the alcohol traffic." The departments of this world-wide organization are: Evangelism, Peace, Purity, Christian Citizenship, Child Welfare, as well as Temperance and Prohibition. The W. C. T. U. stands for the Federal regulation of Motion Pictures. Our responsibility begins at home, by helping our children select what they are to see. We can help educate the community through our department of Motion Pictures in the W. C. T. U. Such education is necessary to get action on the part of the federal government itself, which is needed to bring the industry under social control. Mrs. George B. Mead gave "The Need of Today," as presented in the annual address.

PREVIEWED

Broadway: "Society Doctor". Virginia Bruce, Chester Morris, Billy Burke and Robert Taylor work hard in this story which pits youth against old age in the constant battle against disease. It is the story of life as it is won and lost in the confines of a metropolitan hospital. It moves in interesting fashion through the routine of hospital life, dips into the lives of doctors, internes and nurses, has several moments of lively comedy and many minutes of real and gripping suspense, and one especially effective scene in the operating room. Directed by George B. Seitz, this play is interestingly done from every standpoint, with the exception of occasional moments of needless melodrama.

Orpheum: "Successful Failure" and "You Belong to Me." William Collier, Sr., is to be seen in the opening talkie while Lee Tracy appears in the second feature picture. Both are average films, although the second one will prove the more enjoyable to most audiences. A feature of Wednesday evening's performance will be the amateur show with Billy "Joy" Jackson in the driver's seat.

Kingston: Same.
Kingston: "The Gay Bride". All about a gold digger on the loose for a rich husband. She gets all mixed up with gangsters during her efforts to feather her nest, and these gangsters kill off one another for her favors. One of them played by Chester Morris, survives the gunplay and wins the girl. There is a lot of plot in this one, numerous speedy deaths, and a bustling, hard-boiled humor. The characters in the play all seem to enjoy themselves, especially when they are shooting at one another. Carole Lombard, Sam Hardy, Nat Pendleton, Leo Carrillo and Zazu Pitts are featured.

Tomorrow

Broadway: Same.
Orpheum: Same.
Kingston: "Wings in the Dark". A spirited boost for aviation and its future possibilities through scientific advancement comes to light in this melodrama that moves briskly through a series of exciting happenings with Myrna Loy and Gary Grant featured in the important roles. The story concerns an aviator, blind because of an unfortunate accident, and his effort to be of use in the world despite his handicap. He has perfected a blind flying device, and through the help of two friends he proves to the world how valuable they are to aviation. In true Hollywood style, the plot develops a happy landing. Others in the supporting cast include Roscoe Karns and Hobart Cavanaugh. James Flood directed the picture. Good entertainment.

High School News

Hi-Y Meeting.

On Wednesday evening the members of Hi-Y held a joint meeting. Devotions were conducted by Donald H. Finley. Plans were made for several members of the club to attend the Washington's Birthday conference at Central Valley, N. Y.

Following the routine business, President Arthur Davis introduced the Rev. Howard D. McGrath, who spoke to the group on the causes of war and methods of preventing war. First, Mr. McGrath outlined several of the principal causes of war, such as nationalism, greed for commercial gain and the acquisition of vast territory; an imperialistic desire to rule other nations and jealousy and fear of other nations.

The first and most important product of this is the doctrine of the militarists—that the best security of a nation lies in building powerful armaments. History, as the speaker demonstrated, has proven this to be a useless and ineffective way of preserving peace. It only leads to hostility and fear on the part of other nations, and brings on war. Another thing making permanent peace inevitable, according to Mr. McGrath, is that, while thousands of people earnestly want peace, they do not believe that war can be avoided.

"War can be avoided," said the speaker, "only if enough people come to believe firmly that it can be abolished, and to have the courage of their convictions to stand openly for that belief. But before we can abolish war, we must have four things."

"First, we must possess intelligence. About as much intelligence was used in the conduct of the World War as in the quarrels of children. Foresight and an intelligent understanding of the causes of war and existing circumstances are necessary to prevent war. We must develop a respect and sympathy for the peoples of other nations, to consider things from the standpoint of their international aspect. We must give up that spirit of nationalism which leads to a blind feeling of superiority and contempt for the other fellow. The same rules which govern our personal relationships should govern our national dealings."

The next point presented by the speaker was the necessity for courage. He emphasized the fact that it was extremely hard, when one's country was actually at war, to openly take a stand against it, and incurred abuse and violence. As an example, the Rev. McGrath cited the method advocated by one pacifist who hindered the loading of munitions aboard a ship simply by lying down in front of the laborers engaged in the work. He was kicked and injured and narrowly missed drowning.

The third requirement which was given as necessary for those fighting for peace was to approach the job in the right spirit. In the opinion of the speaker there could be no violence or threats to accomplish disarmament, while to treat those disagreeing with one's own point of view as dumbbells was futile. Only by respecting the militarists and others points of view and working to convince people of the futility of war could peace be attained.

"Lastly," said Mr. McGrath, "we must sacrifice a great deal for peace as much as those who go to war are willing to sacrifice." He gave as an example a group of Mahatma Ghandi's followers, who, unresisting let themselves be mowed down by a regiment of British soldiers. As those in front fell, others took their places. Finally, officers called a halt to the slaughter, and natives won their point. Had they attempted combat, they would probably not only have been killed in as great numbers, but lost the issue as well.

Mr. McGrath said that one advocate of the abolition of war proposed having a huge army of pacifists march between two hostile armies. "They would probably be slaughtered," said the speaker, "as those Indians were slaughtered. But, in being killed, they would be sacrificing no more for peace than any soldier who goes to war is willing to sacrifice in the name of war. And eventually such methods would force a stop in the fighting. While I do not necessarily propose such extremes, still we must be willing to sacrifice for peace."

Old Bill Leegid on
Trail of Alligator

Have You Seen a Stray Gator Around Your Backyard?—Have No Fear. However, For Intrepid Leegid is on The Trail of The Brute.

"Have you seen Ronald anywhere?" asked an agitated man as he dashed into the headquarters of the Explorers' Club uptown. "Calum down stranger, calm down," soothed one of the club members.

"How can I be calm," shouted the agitated one, "with Ronald running around loose and maybe biting some poor innocent person."

"And who is Ronald?" asked Old Bill Leegid, famous trapper and hunter of the Shawangunk Mountains, who had entered the club room in time to hear the remarks of the agitated one.

"Ronald is a Florida alligator I have been raising," explained the agitated man as he dropped into a vacant chair. "And in some way he got out of his cage and disappeared."

"Ah, lost in the snow storm," said a club member as he gazed out of the window at the two inch snowfall that covered the street.

"And just think," said another club member, "he might have crawled under one of the snow drifts and some poor, innocent child on the way to school may step on him."

The other club members shuddered as in their minds' eye they saw some school child with a leg caught in the cruel grip of the alligator's jaw.

"Maybe," suggested another club member, "the gator may be froze to death. If he is a Florida gator he ain't accustomed to our northern climate and the thermometer dropped close to the zero mark you know last night."

"Yes," said the agitated owner of Ronald, "and the poor thing may be lying hidden under the deep snow stiff and stark."

"He might better be there than crawling around seeking what he can devour," said a club member.

"Are you Leegid, the hunter and trapper?" asked the agitated one addressing Old Bill who was gazing reflectively out of the window as he puffed slowly on his pipe.

"Yep," said Leegid.

"Why don't you get out and hunt for Ronald then?" asked the agitated one.

"Well you see," explained Leegid, "I have never hunted gators and don't presume to know anything about their habits, but if you want me to I will take the trail at once."

"But you won't hurt Ronald when you find him though will you?" asked the agitated one.

"What do you want me to do, pick him up and pet him?" asked Leegid sarcastically.

"Well, I wouldn't want you to kill Ronald," defended the agitated one.

dier who goes to war is willing to sacrifice in the name of war. And eventually such methods would force a stop in the fighting. While I do not necessarily propose such extremes, still we must be willing to sacrifice for peace."

At the conclusion of Mr. McGrath's address, the members of Hi-Y had their gym period in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. Two teams from the Alpha chapter met two others selected from the Lambdas in a double basketball game. Both games were hotly contested, and resulted in a draw, with a victory for each chapter.

Liquid Air Demonstration

On Monday morning, February 25, Paul C. Saunders, a member of the faculty of Alfred College, will address a special assembly of physics students. He will speak on the subject of liquid air, which modern science has experimented with and found highly useful in several connections. He will also illustrate his lecture with demonstrations and experiments with liquid air, showing its properties and uses.

"I'll say this," said Leegid, "if you have an idea that I am going to walk up to a Florida alligator, and look him in the eye and tell him to follow me home you got another guess coming."

"These twelve foot Florida gators are dangerous creatures," said one of the club members.

"But Ronald ain't that big," said the agitated one.

"Yeh," said another club member, "then how big is he?"

"Why," explained the agitated one, "he is only six inches long."

"Ah heck," said Old Bill Leegid, as he replaced his trusty gun in the corner.
